Most powerful man in the world

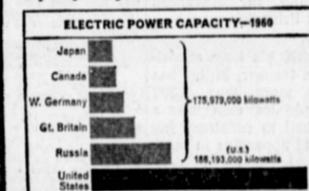

In America, where by far the greatest amount of electricity is produced and used, the average worker is provided with electric power equal to the energy of 456 able-bodied men. With this at hand, he's the most powerful man in the world! No other system has ever come close to matching the record of the investor-owned electric companies of America. We have more electric power capacity than the next five countries combined—three times the capacity of the Soviet Union. They'll sure never bury us electrically! To see how companies like Southern California Edison put the punch in America's power, please read right.

Answers to key questions about the investor-owned electric utility industry and the all-electric future

How does the USA compare with Russia in power?

Every way you measure it, America is well out front in the race for electric power. The production of electricity per person in the USA is more than three times that of the USSR. Looking far into the future, experts do not foresee Russia, with its government-operated system, ever catching up with USA.

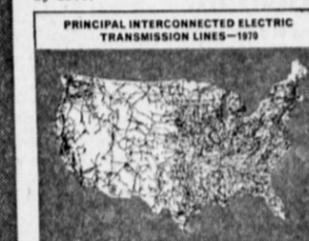

There is hardly anything in the history of industry to compare with the steady, orderly progress made over the past 80-odd years by the electric industry. This chart shows how we stand in electric power capacity compared to other nations.

How well is the USA served electrically by investor-owned utilities?

Virtually every community, farm and hamlet in USA is served with low-cost electricity by investor-owned utilities such as Southern California Edison. Their transmission lines crisscross the face of America, bearing the low-cost power needed for modern living today and in the bright, busy all-electric future.

Here's how America's principal electric transmission lines will cover the U.S. by 1970.

By 1970 the investor-owned electric companies expect to nearly double their present generating capacity. By 1980 this figure is expected to reach over three and one-half times today's total.

This growth is pretty staggering, even in a land where growth is taken for granted. But when it is remembered that this surging growth of low-cost electricity comes on a pay-its-own-way basis—with not a penny of tax support—it is doubly significant. It is, fortunately for us taxpayers, totally unnecessary for the government even to attempt or consider duplicating the service and facilities of the investor-owned utility companies of America.
